Soil Association

The Soil Association has a number of areas of activity. From preserving our soil by using fewer antibiotics or reducing pesticides, to reducing our intake of over processed foods and farming differently, they are leading climate actions in all its forms, including reforestation.

They support everyone to grow – whether that's growing food or developing healthy connections with nature and joining together with others to support a nature-friendly future. They work together with farmers, businesses, policymakers and fellow citizens, to make an impact on the food you eat, the clothes you wear and the environment you live in.

They work on the following areas, but look at their website for a wider view:

- they have a wholly-owned subsidiary Soil Association Certification Limited, the UK's largest organic certification body
- Food for Life is a programme making good food the easy choice for everyone
- The Soil Association Land Trust which acquires and maintains farmland sustainably and connects the public with land stewardship

They have different email forms for different aspects of their work.
